An Index of Articles Relating to Mexican Americans as Extracted from the Houston Post

Historical Note:
This index of the Houston Post was compiled in 1987. Dr. Thomas Kreneck, former archivist for the Houston Metropolitan Research Center, taught a “Chicano History Since 1910” course for the Mexican American Studies Program at the University of Houston. Dr. Kreneck assigned the task of searching the Houston Post newspaper for Spanish surnames and Mexican American topics. The undergraduate students used index cards to document their findings.

Scope & Content Note:
This index features scanned copies of index cards housed in the MSS 0352 Mexican American Small Collections, Box 8.

This index covers 1912 through 1987 with the bulk of the content spanning 1912 through 1938. This resource is not comprehensive and has several gaps with entire years excluded, possibly as part of a sampling approach.

Each index card features the date of the article, page number, and column location of the article in the Houston Post, and a summary. Many cards include the name of the student who documented this content.

Personal identification information found on the index cards has been redacted for confidentiality purposes.

Concerning the teaching of Spanish in the

- Valid point, criticism by a visiting

The figures shown represent the average of five years, which is considered to be a satisfactory basis for the calculation of the total power of the storm. It is interesting to note that the average wind speed during the hurricane season is lower than during other seasons.

Jul 23, 1943 3 post 11 col 5
